

Phyllis Robertson Home admission information

Phyllis Robertson Home is a residential care facility for adults with disabilities. It is situated in the suburb of Prinshof, at the extension of Dr Savage Road West between Tshwane Hospital and the Pretoria Zoo. - ❖ Extensive care – Residents who require nappy changes, to be lifted onto/from the toilet or different feeding requirements.
- ❖ Full care - Residents who require moderate assistance with ADLs fall into this category. There are care-workers and a staff nurse in addition to the professional nurse and housemother, who collectively look after the wellbeing of the residents 24 hours a day.

Medical care

In terms of medical care, Phyllis Robertson Home employs a registered nurse and enrolled nurses who see to the daily medical requirements of the residents. Transport is provided for hospital, clinic or private medical professional visits to and medication is collected monthly from government facilities. Families pay for transport costs (the first trip per month is free). In some cases, a care worker is provided as support to accompany a resident and families pay for this. Although Phyllis Robertson Home assists with making appointments and transport, the medical wellbeing of any resident remains the responsibility of the parent/guardian and where medication is not provided by the state, it will be obtained at the parent/guardian's cost.

In terms of psychosocial support, the home has a part-time social worker who sees to it that residents have someone to talk to regarding any personal and interpersonal challenges they may be experiencing. The housemother organises and coordinates social events. Additional therapies such as physiotherapy and occupational therapy are only provided sporadically when students from the University of Pretoria complete their practical phases under supervision. If required, the family needs to arrange privately.

Rooms and personal items

Rooms are provided unfurnished. Families are encouraged to personalise the room of the resident with photos, decoration, familiar bedding and other items that may make the room more comfortable/homely for the resident. Electronics like a personal TV or computer are permitted, with the understanding that the home will not take any responsibility for these or any other personal item. All personal belongings must be clearly marked with the resident's name. All phones, tablets or computers provided to residents must have an app to enable tracing installed on it. We request that the rooms remain simply and minimally decorated. Too many items may make the room look untidy, have the potential to be a safety hazard and become a hindrance when it comes to providing care and cleaning. Cameras may be installed in the room and monitored by the family.

Protective workshop

Employment Solutions is an independent protective workshop on the premises where residents who are able to work with their hands may be occupied with assembling and packaging work from 08:00 to 15:00 from Monday to Friday. A beneficiary that requires a care-worker to take part will have to have one provided by the family at an additional cost for lunch.

Day attendees are full participants in all the daily activities that take place during the stimulation centre's operating hours. Meals and teas are included. Families are responsible for transporting day attendees to and from the centre.
